Telegram Boss Agrees to Closer Police Cooperation

Telegram boss Pavel Durov has committed the platform to working more closely with law enforcement, while also cracking down on illegal activity.

The Russian-born founder and CEO of the messaging platform said IP addresses and telephone numbers of those who break the app's rules will be shared with police "in response to valid legal requests."

This is a departure from the previous policy, which was only to share such information with law enforcement on receipt of a court order indicating suspected terrorism charges.

Telegram's terms of service have now been updated accordingly.

All of these Signal channels are likely to add more members ...

- If you have Signal contacts, encourage them to consider killing these Signal Groups based on their Origins.
- Watch for alternative channels (and please send us Feedback!) if you see any trends shifting away from Signal.
- Be aware that Telegram is actively enforcing controls and may have a dramatic shift in value for future intelligence gathering

(So far, we've seen no change in Telegram's support for Hamas channels, hacker channels, or Russian DDOS channels, but we'll keep watching ...)
