COUNTS 1 – 3

18. Companies known as Credit Reporting Agencies (CRA's) are in the business of assembling and evaluating consumer credit information for the purpose of providing reports about the credit-worthiness of consumers to third parties. These reports are commonly known as "credit reports." CRAs include such companies as Equifax, Experian, and Transunion.

19. CRAs sell credit reports to businesses (referred to herein as "end-users") that are in need of information concerning the credit-worthiness of consumers. Such businesses include, among others, banks, lenders, merchants, and landlords. Credit reports assist businesses to make decisions concerning whether, and on what terms, to do business with the potential customer that is the subject of a particular credit report.

20. Credit reports typically contain a credit score, which is derived from a statistical calculation that quantifies the credit risk posed by a prospective customer, who is identified by such factors as the customer's name and Social Security Number. The credit score of a particular customer is influenced by many factors, including the consumer's payment history, utilization of credit, balances, available credit limit, and length of credit history. Credit scoring is widely used by end-users to evaluate applications for credit, identify prospective borrowers, and manage existing credit accounts.

21. Credit reports are derived from information provided to CRAs by entities referred to herein as “furnishers.” Furnishers are entities that, during the course of their business, acquire information concerning the credit and payment histories of their customers, who are identified by, among other things, their name and Credit Profile Number (CPN). CRAs utilize the consumer’s Social Security Number as the consumer’s CPN. Common furnishers are credit card issuers, automobile lenders, department stores, utilities, insurers, and collection agencies. Many furnishers are also end-users of credit reports.

22. Lines of credit, or credit accounts, are the most common item appearing on credit reports. CRAs commonly refer to these as “tradelines.” The existence of tradelines, and the timeliness of payments on tradelines, which are linked to a specific individual through their Social Security Number, can impact the ultimate credit score of an individual. In other words, the existence of positive tradelines, or the removal of negative tradelines, on a consumer’s credit report can impact that individual’s ability to obtain credit, goods, and services.

23. Consumers have the ability to dispute the completeness or accuracy of information contained in that consumer’s file at a CRA. For example, a consumer could contact Equifax to provide notification that the consumer did not, in fact, fail to make timely payments on a tradeline, or that the consumer did not open a particular tradeline.

24. CRAs were required to block credit information for a consumer that the consumer alleged was the result of identity theft. To cause the CRAs to block information arising from an alleged identity theft, the consumer was required to present to the CRA: (1) proof of his or her identity, (2) a copy of an identity theft report (such as a police report), and (3) a statement claiming that the specified tradelines or other information at issue did not relate to any transaction by the consumer. Absent proof that the alleged identity theft was unfounded, the CRAs were required to block the disputed information within 4 days of receiving the report of identity theft.

25. Because of the importance of credit histories and credit scores to lending and other business decisions, the integrity and availability of accurate data and information maintained by CRAs was important to furnishers, end-users, and CRAs. The fraudulent inclusion of positive credit information, such as timely payments by a consumer on a tradeline, had the ability to falsely boost the appearance of a consumer's credit-worthiness and credit score. Likewise, the fraudulent removal of negative tradelines from a consumer's credit history through, for example, a false allegation that the tradeline resulted from identity theft, also had the ability to falsely boost the appearance of a consumer's credit-worthiness and credit score.

THE SCHEME

26. Beginning at a time unknown, but no later than November of 2012, and continuing to a time unknown, but no earlier than July of 2019, within the Eastern District of North Carolina and elsewhere, the defendant, MICHAEL ANTHONY GRIFFIN, SR., aiding and abetting, devised and intended to devise a scheme to defraud, and to obtain money and property by means of materially false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises.

MANNER AND MEANS

27. MICHAEL GRIFFIN carried on an informal business operation which purported to “repair” the credit of individuals. In fact, MICHAEL GRIFFIN engaged in a scheme to defraud credit bureaus, end-users of credit information, and in some instances, MICHAEL GRIFFIN’s own clients.

28. To carry out the scheme, MICHAEL GRIFFIN informed potential clients that he could boost their credit scores and, in some instances, provide them with an alternative CPN to conduct credit transactions. MICHAEL GRIFFIN typically charged a fee of several thousand dollars for these services. MICHAEL GRIFFIN accepted payment for his services in cash, via check and via money order.

29. MICHAEL GRIFFIN filed and caused to be filed fraudulent disputes with the CRAs, alleging that a particular negative trade line on the client’s credit report was the result of the theft of the client’s identity. To convince the credit reporting agencies that his clients’ identities had been compromised, MICHAEL GRIFFIN drafted and caused to be drafted false police reports which purported to reflect that the client had contacted the police to report the loss or theft of their identity. MICHAEL GRIFFIN then transmitted and caused to be transmitted the false dispute paperwork, including the fraudulent police reports, to CRAs via United States Mail or interstate fax transmissions.

30. In fact, however, MICHAEL GRIFFIN's clients did not file the police reports that MICHAEL GRIFFIN sent to the CRAs alleging identity theft. In reality, the police reports sent to the CRAs were fabricated.

31. The CRAs received and relied upon the fraudulent dispute paperwork created and transmitted by MICHAEL GRIFFIN, resulting in the removal of negative tradelines from the client credit profiles.

32. In some instances, MICHAEL GRIFFIN also offered clients, in exchange for money, the opportunity to utilize an alternative credit profile to conduct credit transactions. In reality, the credit profiles were fraudulently created by Griffin so that Griffin and others could engage in credit transactions without utilizing their true identity and revealing their true credit history.

USE OF THE WIRES

33. On or about each of the dates set forth below, in the Eastern District of North Carolina and elsewhere, the defendant, MICHAEL ANTHONY GRIFFIN, SR., for the purpose of executing the scheme described above, and attempting to do so, caused to be transmitted by means of wire communication in interstate commerce the signals and sounds described below for each count:

The Conspiracy

34. Beginning at a time unknown, but no later than March of 2017, and continuing to a time unknown, but no earlier than December 31, 2018, within the Eastern District of North Carolina and elsewhere, the defendants MICHAEL ANTHONY GRIFFIN, SR. and REGINA GRIFFIN, did knowingly combine, conspire, confederate, and agree with each other and others known and unknown to the grand jury, to commit an offense against the United States, to wit, to knowingly execute and attempt to execute a scheme to obtain any of the moneys, funds, credits, assets, and other property owned by and under the custody and control of a financial institution, to wit, Synchrony Bank, by means of materially false and fraudulent pretenses, representations, and promises, in violation of Title 18, United States Code, Section 1344.

Purpose of the Conspiracy

35. It was the purpose of the conspiracy for the conspirators to acquire credit and monies in the names of credit profiles that did not belong to them, and thereby avoid responsibility for the debts.

Manner and Means

36. Paragraphs 1 through 25 are realleged and incorporated into this Count.

37. MICHAEL GRIFFIN, SR. conspired with REGINA GRIFFIN, and various other individuals known and unknown to the grand jury, to create and use, fraudulent credit profiles to obtain credit cards from Lowes.

38. Lowes is a national home improvement chain store that sold, among other things, various gift cards and stored-value cards. Lowes costumers had the ability to apply to Synchrony Bank for a Lowes credit card account. Synchrony Bank was an institution whose deposits were insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

39. To create the fraudulent credit profiles, MICHAEL GRIFFIN, SR. would acquire a Social Security Number belonging to another individual, who often resided in another state. In some instances, the Social Security Numbers belonged to minors.

40. MICHAEL GRIFFIN then collaborated with REGINA GRIFFIN, as well as other conspirators known and unknown to the grand jury, to create fictitious identities utilizing, among other things, Social Security Numbers that did not belong to the conspirators. Typically, the conspirators utilized a "mail drop," or mailbox that was not directly linked to the conspirators, as the mailing address for the fictitious identity. In some instances, the conspirators also created a new email address for the fictitious identity. Additionally, the conspirators frequently utilized pre-paid phone accounts as the phone number to be attributed to the fictitious identity. In some, but not all instances, the conspirators used their name, or that of a family member, for the fictitious identity.

41. After creating the fictitious identity, a member of the conspiracy opened a Lowes credit card, through Synchrony Bank. When applying for the credit card, the conspirators utilized the fictitious identity rather than their true identity and Social Security Number.

42. After being approved by Synchrony Bank for a Lowes credit card, a member of the conspiracy utilized the card to purchase, among other things a large quantity of stored-value cards. Stored-value cards are a form of debit account which is not linked to a specific individual. The holder of the stored-value card can use the card as a cash equivalent to make purchases of goods and services from virtually any business that accepts VISA or Mastercard as a form of payment.

43. After purchasing a large number of stored-value cards and other items using the fraudulently acquired credit card from Synchrony Bank, the conspirators then failed to pay the balances on the credit accounts.

44. Since the credit balances were linked to Social Security Numbers (SSNs) that did not belong to the conspirators, as well as to fictitious addresses and temporary email accounts and phone numbers, the conspirators avoided responsibility for the debts incurred by Synchrony Bank.

45. The conspirators failed to pay the balances that they incurred on the fraudulent credit accounts, resulting in losses to Synchrony Bank.

Overt Acts

46. In furtherance of the conspiracy, and to effect the objects thereof, there were committed in the Eastern District of North Carolina and elsewhere various overt acts, including, but not limited to, a conspirator's creation, and a conspirator's use of the following fictitious identities, as described in the table below, within the date ranges identified below:

COUNTS 21-28

THE SCHEME

60. Beginning at a time unknown, but no later than March of 2016 and continuing to March of 2020, in the Eastern District of North Carolina and elsewhere, the defendants listed in each row of the table below, aiding and abetting each other, devised and intended to devise a scheme to defraud, and to obtain money and property by means of materially false and fraudulent pretenses, representations and promises.

MANNER AND MEANS

61. Introductory paragraphs 1 through 25 are realleged and incorporated herein. MICHAEL GRIFFIN, SR., assisted various individuals to obtain either fictitious identities, or fictitious documents, that enabled them to obtain credit, goods, services, leaseholds, and other things of value.

62. With respect to the creation of fictitious identities, MICHAEL GRIFFIN, SR. assisted individuals to create a fictitious identity, consisting of, at a minimum, an alternate Social Security Number (SSN) and Date of Birth (DOB). This fictitious identity could then be used, in lieu of the individual's true identity, to apply for credit, goods, leaseholds, and other things of value. The fictitious identity also allowed the scheme participants to avoid responsibility for the debts in the event of default. The fictitious identities utilized are described in the table below.

63. With respect to creation of fictitious documents, MICHAEL GRIFFIN, SR. maintained various document templates that allowed him and others to fabricate documents to use when applying for, among other things, credit, loans, goods, and leaseholds. In general, these fabricated documents made it appear that the applicants supplying the documents were more credit-worthy than they were in fact. The fictitious documents utilized are described in the table below.
